Introduction

The integration of Artificial Intelligence (AI) into various educational fields has brought about transformative changes in the way teaching and learning are conducted. In the context of English literature, AI can potentially redefine how texts are analyzed, understood, and appreciated by students. In India, where there is a growing emphasis on the importance of English as a global language of communication, literature classes are increasingly benefiting from AI-powered tools and platforms. This article explores the role of AI in English literature teaching within the Indian educational system, examining its applications, challenges, and potential for the future.
